Duluth natural surface trails to reopen Saturday, December 4

[Duluth, MN] Duluth's natural surface trails will reopen on Saturday, December 4, for public use if the trail surfaces are frozen. Temperatures during this time of the year can fluctuate, which will result in trails being open or closed for use.

The City of Duluth's Parks and Recreation division staff would like to remind trail users to observe good trail etiquette and stewardship by respecting trail closures and avoiding wet or muddy trails. If you are on a trail and leave a footprint or bicycle tire imprint, it is best to turn around to reduce the potential for additional trail damage. If encountering a wet or muddy spot in an otherwise completely dry trail, users should go through the area rather than around to prevent further trail widening.
